CENTER FOR COMPANIES THAT CARE ANNOUNCES ITS 15TH ANNIVERSARY HONOR ROLL RECIPIENTS

Including 3 Employers Recognized for Decade of Appreciating People, Developing Great Leaders, & Supporting Local Communities

CHICAGO (March 16, 2017) —Center for Companies That Care (www.companies-that-care.org) announced its 15th Annual Honor Roll today. The Honor Roll, a national list recognizing employers for outstanding workplace practices and active community involvement, includes both privately-held and publicly-traded organizations, as well as not-for-profit employers.

Those companies attaining this designation respect employees and are committed to community service. They demonstrate 10 Characteristics that include appreciating people, developing great leaders, and giving back. This uniqueness defines the standard for all organizations that strive to be recognized as great places to work and positively impact the community.

“Since the Honor Roll’s inception 15 years ago, many things have changed in our country and our business climate, but what hasn’t changed is that the companies on this list, like those before them, exemplify the best of the best,” says Marci Koblenz, co-founder and president, Center for Companies That Care. “We are pleased to recognize these organizations that have remained connected with their employees and communities to understand their needs and to take the human toll into account when making business decisions. They demonstrate a commitment to social responsibility, for their employees and their communities, year in and year out.”

Two key components of the selection process are a written application and employee survey results. Employer feedback has indicated this process helps them raise the bar for their operations and to look for ways to continuously improve.
